Date of report submission to ITTF: 10/06/2018

Situation	Weather: The weather in November in Almeria sees gradually decreasing temperatures and higher levels of rainfall than the dry summer months of July or August. The average temperature is 17 degrees Celsius and the average high and low temperatures range from 21 to an overnight low of 12. The average rainfall is 30mm over around 6 days throughout the month. The chance of rain falling on any given day in November is 23% and this does not vary much during the month. There is a greater chance of the rain being moderate or light than heavy so an umbrella is not a necessity, but it might be a good idea to bring clothing for cooler, wetter days if out exploring the city sights. The average daily hours of sunshine have decreased now to just 3 hours per day as the length of the day shortens by around 45minutes from the first of the month to the end. The sun rises at around 7.40am at the start of the month and sunset is at approximately 6pm. Cloud cover is relatively consistent throughout the month at around 40%, mostly clear skies. Humidity varies from 50% to 88% during November, becoming generally less humid towards the end of the month. Sea temperatures are getting chilly in this month and only reach 19C, so swimming in the sea is not advised. Wind speeds are calm to moderate and range from 0 m/s to 7 m/s, rarely getting stronger than 11 m/s. Special: Hotels in the area were built for the Mediterranean games held in Almeria in 2005.
